Ayce checks out the new 1757 Golf Club

Right now there are two things to know about 1757 Golf Club. The first is that it was formerly known as Presidential, not to be confused with Lake Presidential in Maryland. Presidential was renamed 1757 Golf Club in recognition of the founding year for Loudoun County. The other fact is that the course is open for play as the newest premier daily fee course in Northern Virginia. This is the important point for those of us anxious to play the course we have heard so much about.

Currently ten of the holes designed by David Heatwole are available for play. Heatwole is a long time collaborator with Jack Nicklaus, and the influence is apparent from the first tee. Most of the holes typically show you everything you will encounter as you tee it up. The fair but challenging layout uses the natural terrain to advantage with water or marsh on many holes. While the course will be rerouted upon its completion next spring, a majority of the current holes have bias for right handed slicers!

The clubhouse and facilities are first class. A crescent shaped driving range is anchored by a golf academy building on one end, and the Max Out Golf Labs on the other. The Max Out Labs offer state of the art analysis of any swing under the capable eye of Christian Voges. An active summer golf camp was underway on the day of our visit, and an academy with soon be operating from the vacant training center. The clubhouse is perfectly functional for all types of golf events. A boardroom, ballroom, pro shop, lavish grill room, and offices comprise the main structure. The convenient location, just a mile off busy route 28 near Dulles, affords many golfers the chance to take a "golf lunch" in style.

The course shows its newness, but is in great shape. Next spring this will be an awesome 18 holer that everyone is talking about. Play it now and you will be back for the grand opening for sure. Rates now reflect the ten open holes, but a full regulation round is achievable measuring out at 6,600 yards. Director of Golf Brian Wilcox provides terrific leadership at this well run Casper Management golf club. Remember, it is not Lake Presidential (that's in MD) and it is open for play now.

Eisenhower Golf Course Report by Lefty

Last Friday, Bogeyman and I were cordially invited to participate in the Double Bogey Blues Gentleman's Invitational held at Eisenhower Golf Course in nearby Crownsville MD – for those of you into jousting; it's not too far from where the Maryland Renaissance Festival is held on MD 178. On this particular day, Bogeyman and I were paired with what we thought was to be a formidable combination Father-Son team of "John and John". The format was 2 Man best ball and by the 4th hole, Father John was dissing Son John and telling him there would be an interview process for the next tournament before he selected him as a partner... alas, another team falls victim of trying to compete against the Waggle team! The course itself can be best described as a "muni" but the layout is definitely fun to play. The conditions were acceptable but some areas of the course definitely displayed the need of some rain (which we actually had on a couple of holes) but we managed to get around without getting anyone hurt! There are some holes which are fairly tight and require a good drive and smart approach but overall, it's pretty player friendly. On this day at the Invitational, it sure was "player friendly", as girls from Scores in Baltimore were ambassadors of good will :) As you could expect, there was some chicanery with the scoring and for some unknown reason, Waggle finished just out of the money...but at least we beat the John-John team! A great time was had by all and with the Waggle Pass, you can play for a players fee, even on weekends – check it out at the Waggle Pro Shop and give Eisenhower a play when you get a minute. Tell Gretchen the cart girl that Waggle sent you!
