Steelers Fan Party at Renditions

The Steeler Nation is everywhere! When we first received the email from Renditions announcing their Steelers Fan Party on Sunday December 14th for the Steelers/Ravens game we were excited. Lefty and Bogeyman (the owners of Waggle.com) are originally from Pittsburgh and HUGE Steelers fans. But then we started wondering why a Baltimore area course would have a Steelers party when these two teams play each other? The answer came from RC, GM at Renditions. "There are so many Pittsburgh people in the area, we have Pittsburgh area people on our staff and there are several Pittsburgh bars in the area so we decided to give all those Steelers fans and golfers a place to go and enjoy the game."

So Sun 12/14 be sure to head to Renditions for their 11:30am shotgun start and enjoy the Steeler party for the Steeler/Ravens game after the round for only $59.99. Get all the food and drink you can eat from their fan menu featuring Pittsburgh favorites like Primanti sandwiches, The O hot dogs and Iron City beer. The menu also includes all you can eat and drink steamed shrimp, sliders, wings, and chips and salsa. Don't want to golf? Just stop by for the party for only $29.99. Reservations not required but are encouraged, call 410-798-9798 for details.

Myrtle Beach Report by Ayce

The day after Turkey Day three of us set out for warmer climes to join up with two dozen local golfers from the American Singles Golf Association (ASGA). My traveling companions own condos at Myrtle Beach and wanted to check on their investments (bad news there as values have declined by half in the past couple of years). Great weather on Friday's drive gave way to rain on Saturday, so we took the Sun Cruz casino ship out of N. Myrtle for an afternoon of 'replacement golf'. The trip was a lot of fun, particularly since most hotels have vouchers for comped cruises and buffets. The seas were rough enough to make a few in our party uncomfortable, but it was definitely a good substitute for golf. Unfortunately we missed our round at Tidewater Golf Club which is one of the area's highest rated courses. In fact, if you want to buy a couple of rain checks as holiday gifts, contact ken@waggle.com.

Overall, this resort area was like a ghost town. Construction has come to a halt and 91 properties were auctioned off on Monday at the Horrey County Courthouse steps. Surprisingly the golf courses have not lowered rates, given the scarcity of players. And, if you book golf in Myrtle be prepared to play or get vouchers if it rains as they don't believe in refunds.

Saturday night we went to Pete's Landing Restaurant on the intercoastal waterway to watch a score of private yachts perform the annual holiday boat parade. Lots of lighted boats and 'lit' yachtsmen poured in the Pete's Landing for a good time. From there we bounced to Fat Harold's, which is a mecca for the shag culture. It was an exciting evening given the fervor of the locals for this smooth dance powered by "Carolina Beach Music." Be sure to try it.

Golf on Sunday took place at Glen Dornoch Golf Club. It is one of four partner courses in the Myrtle Beach area. The course was a good average resort course, and priced as such. Almost no golfers except our group played in the cloudy weather. Glen Dornoch is on the inlet to the Atlantic Ocean so nice views of the marshes, wildlife, and passing boats grab your attention. The course itself only gets your attention for the last three holes, where it confronts you with Pete Dye on acid. The closing holes are as difficult as any in the US, particularly with the omnipresent wind at the beach. The drive home was again an easy one. Best tip: take the speed limit signs to heart, cops everywhere!
